Thursday October Christian: The First-Born of Bounty’s Progeny

This is a biography of an obscure individual born of the ashes of the H.M.A.S. Bounty on the remote, inaccessible, and uninhabited Pitcairn Island in 1790. Thursday October Christian is best known to amateur and professional historians, philatelists, and others interested in the romance and adventure of the South Seas. He was eighteen years old when he first had contact with the outside world with the arrival of the American sealer Mayhew Folger of the Tagus in 1808. In the forty years of his life he would meet, greet, and otherwise interact with sealers, whalers, naval officers, traders, and others calling on Pitcairn. This article synthesizes these disparate encounters while exploring a name change conundrum revolving around the protagonist. Thursday October Christian was an ordinary person whose life story now lingers in disparate reports, notices, and accounts of archived and otherwise rare documents.

Introduction

On 28 April 1789, Fletcher Christian mutinied against Lieutenant Bligh, commander of the Bounty. Fletcher forced Bligh and eighteen crew into the Bounty’s launch around Tofua. Miraculously, Bligh sailed almost 6,000 kilometers to the Dutch settlement of Coupang, Timor. Fletcher and the mutineers, eventually (January 1790) encountered the mischarted, remote, and wave-inundated cliffs of Pitcairn Island (25° 04’ S, 130° 06’ W) in the South Pacific Ocean (Figure 1).1 Fletcher Christian located Pitcairn Island even though his source2 had it located 342 km west from its actual location. The mutineers and their Polynesian consorts experienced tumultuous early years with deaths from accidents and murders, until settling down under the tutelage of the sole male survivor John Adams (aka Alexander Smith) around 1800. Fletcher’s son, Thursday October, though born into infamy on the inconsequential and isolated mutineer’s settlement of Pitcairn Island, entertained, guided, and hosted seafaring visitors from far and away.

2 John, Hawkesworth, et al., An Account of the Voyages Undertaken by the Order of His Present Majesty for Making Discoveries in the Southern Hemisphere, and Successively Performed by Commodore Byron, Captain Wallis, Captain Carteret, and Captain Cook, in the Dolphin, the Swallow, and the Endeavour: Drawn Up from the Journals Which Were Kept by the Several Commanders, and from the Papers of Joseph Banks, Esq. (London: Printed for W. Strahan and T. Cadell in the Strand, 1773).
It is unknown why Fletcher Christian named his son Thursday October Christian. Glynn Christian suggested that naming a child after the day and month of birth was a common form of protest among West Indian slaves. Most accounts place the month and year of his birth as October 1790; however, Ian Ball speculated that Thursday might have been born on board the Bounty in 1789. However, the Register includes several entries on Thursday October Christian, including his birth on the island during October 1790.

Life Events and Visitors

Thursday October Christian was the son of Fletcher Christian and a full-blooded Tahitian named Mauatua (Isabella); he had two siblings, Charles and Mary Ann. Thursday was almost three years old when his father succumbed when ‘some natives proceeded to shoot Christian; they found him clearing some ground for a garden.’ The next event is his marriage to Susannah in 1806, a full-blooded Tahitian and much older; he was around sixteen and she over thirty. The Register lists the birth of six children (Charles, Joseph, Mary, Polly, and Peggy), including a son born in 1820 whom he called ‘Thursday O. Christian,’ that is, the II.

Thursday October Christian entered the picture at aged 18 and 24 years, respectively, on the arrival of the Topaz (1808) and Briton and Tagus (1814). Mayhew Folger’s rediscovery of Pitcairn Island in 1808 finds ‘three young men in a double canoe’ paddling toward the Topaz. Presumably, one of these men was Thursday October Christian, at least according to Hough. Several accounts reiterate his physical appearance with ‘tall’ reappearing more than once. Six years later, the British Captain Pipon of the Tagus described Thursday October Christian as about six feet tall, ‘brown cast,’ with dark, deep black hair, again wearing the loincloth, hat with feathers, and ‘occasionally a Pauncho.’ John Bechervaise of the Blossom, during a December 1825 visit, noted that Thursday was agile and powerful. The only depiction of the first-born is a sketch by Lieutenant Shillibeer during an 1814 visit of the H.M.S. Briton (Figure 2). Curiously, Lieutenant Shillibeer titled this portrait ‘Friday Fletcher October Christian.’

---

Pipon wrote that Thursday spoke English ‘in a manner vastly pleasing.’ He appears to have been generous with one account finding him offering a present of ‘some fruit and a hog’ and another noting his hospitable, good humored and obliging nature. On bringing ‘refreshments’ through the surf, Pipon observed that Thursday was a ‘most active and expert swimmer.’ On board the Briton two observations recorded by Lieutenant Shillibeer offer a glimpse of Thursday’s psyche. The first described Thursday as saying grace before and after meals; this stemmed from a conservative and devout Christian faith prescribed by John Adams. The second, his uneasiness when a black servant entered the gunroom. Thursday rose, and said, ‘I don’t like that black fellow, I must go.’ Being in an unfamiliar situation, Thursday’s reaction projects fear rather than prejudice.

American captain Henry King of the Elizabeth mentioned a feast given at Thursday’s house on a visit 3 March 1819. Captain King witnessed the islanders performing grace before and after dinner, individually beginning with the most senior. The menu included a suckling pig, two fowls, yams, plantains, bananas, and a ‘species of apple peculiar to the island.’ Six years later, December 1825, English Captain Beechey of the H.M. sloop Blossom attended a dinner hosted by Thursday. Beechey found a table complete with an incongruous setting of plates, knives, and forks, which he described as ‘an unexpected sight’ given their isolation

---

16 Pipon, Capt Pipon’s Narrative of the State Mutineers of H. M. Ship Bounty Settled on Pitcairns Island in the South Sea.
17 Philip Pipon, "The Descendants of the Bounty's Crew: As First Discovered by the Briton and Tagus Frigates. – From the Unpublished Mss. of the Late Capt. Pipon, R.N." The United Service Journal (1834), Pt.1: 197.
18 Shillibeer, A Narrative of the Briton’s Voyage to Pitcairn’s Island, 89.
19 The suggestion that Thursday’s reaction might have attributed to fear rather than prejudice came from an anonymous reviewer.
and remoteness.\textsuperscript{21} During the \textit{Blossom}’s visit from 5-21 December 1825, Thursday demonstrated his athletic and agile nature.\textsuperscript{22} He impressed Beechey as a perceptive guide with the ability to hear faint signals sent from across the island.\textsuperscript{23} At thirty-five years he was still a vigorous individual able to run down wild goats, at least on level ground. Bechervaise of the \textit{Blossom} recounts: ‘During my stay I saw October Christian and young Adams run down several, which were sent as presents to the seaman of the B----.’\textsuperscript{24} Through all these encounters, beginning with Folger (Topaz, 1808) and continuing with Captain Staines, Captain Pipon and Lieutenant Shillibeer (\textit{Tagus} and \textit{Briton}, 1814), Captain King (\textit{Elizabeth}, 1819), and then Captain Beechey (\textit{Blossom}, 1825), all found Thursday to be an thoughtful, hospitable and outwardly religious person with his habit of saying grace before and after meals (Figure 3).\textsuperscript{25}

Fears that limited resources could support a growing population, especially during a prolonged drought, “could dry up the unreliable springs for good, shrivel garden crops upon which so much depended, and empty storage basins of drinking water.”\textsuperscript{26} Thursday October Christian, along with his namesake Thursday October the II, were among the roll of Pitcairn Islanders transported to Tahiti on the \textit{Lucy Anne} in March 1831.\textsuperscript{27} Thursday October Christian died on 21 April 1831, within one month of immigrating to Tahiti to an infectious disease epidemic (Figure 3). In two groups the islanders returned to Pitcairn Island with one smaller group arriving on June 27, 1831, and a larger group on September 4, 1831, respectively. Sixteen or one-fifth of the islanders population died from April to November as a result of this failed immigration attempt.\textsuperscript{28}

\section*{Name Change Confusion}

Ian Ball referred to the first born as ‘Friday (soon to be Thursday).’ He quotes Warren Clive Christian (1914-2003) stating that ‘Fletcher get Friday October, who we later called Thursday, and Friday/Thursday get Thursday October the

\begin{thebibliography}{100}
\bibitem{21} Frederick W. Beechey, \textit{Narrative of A Voyage To The Pacific And Beering's Strait, To Co-Operate With The Polar Expeditions: Performed In His Majesty's Ship Blossom, Under The Command Of Captain F. W. Beechey, R. N. In The Years 1825, 26, 27, 28} (London: Henry Colburn and Richard Bentley, 1831), Vo. 1, 101.
\bibitem{22} Trevor Lummis, \textit{Life and Death in Eden: Pitcairn Island and the Bounty Mutineers} (London: Phoenix, 2000), 92.
\bibitem{24} Bechervaise, \textit{Thirty-six Years of a Seafaring Life}, 173.
\bibitem{25} Shillibeer, \textit{Narrative of the Briton’s Voyage to Pitcairn Island}, 82. Shillibeer used Friday even though Captain Staines on same visit reported Thursday.
\bibitem{26} Murray, \textit{Pitcairn Island: The First 2000 Years}, 78-79.
\bibitem{28} Kirk, \textit{Pitcairn Island, the Bounty Mutineers and Their Descendant}, 80-81.
\end{thebibliography}
Second.29 One of the most intriguing paragraphs from Pitcairn: Children of Mutiny, provides Ball’s interpretation:

On the day he came into the world, his father made a simple calendar error. The boy was first Friday October and continued to be known by that name until the skipper of the Topaz came ashore in 1808 and informed the islanders that, while their chronometer from the Bounty was still accurate and they had kept meticulous track of the days, months, and years, Fletcher had slipped up on one basic point. After deposing Bligh, and while the mutineers were sailing back to Tahiti, Fletcher forgot to record that they had crossed the International Date Line. His first son was born on a day the Pitcairn colonists observed as Friday. Actually, east of the Date Line, it was Thursday. Friday October thanked Captain Folger for pointing out this error, and henceforth was known as Thursday October.30

The Guide to Pitcairn,31 claims that Thursday October Christian was ‘Born in October 1790... was also known as Friday October Christian after 1814 when time was corrected.’ This quote gives the year 1814 and reason as a ‘time adjustment’ for the change from Thursday to Friday. Further, the ‘also known as’ suggests that both names were acceptable, that one did not negate the other. Allen Frost puts forth a reasonable argument for Friday first in his Mutiny, Mayhem, Methodology: Bounty’s Enigmatic Voyage. He notes two eyewitness accounts (see Shillibeer and Jenny) referring to the protagonist as Friday. Further, Frost points to a trail on Pitcairn Island known to the islanders ‘into the 1970s’ as Friday Road.32 While not conclusive, Frost at least provided anecdotal “evidence” to consider.33 However, most accounts, including Shapiro’s, mention even if parenthetically, a name change: ‘The eldest was Thursday (Friday in the island records) October Christian, then eighteen years old and already a tall, powerfully built man.’34

Name Change in Context of International Date Line

Antonio Pigafetta, a survivor of Magellan’s westward sailing global circumnavigation (1519-1522), provided proof positive the need for calendar

---

30 Ibid., 114.
34 Shapiro, The Heritage of the Bounty, 36.
adjustment on returning from such a journey. To Pigafetta’s amazement, he thought it Wednesday, but to the Portuguese it was Thursday. Thereafter, the Spanish demarcated a date line encapsulating the Philippines, placing it on the same date as South America. In the 1800s with Spanish colonialism waning in South America, the Philippine Adjustment (1845) repositioned its date line to align with Spain.

The International Date Line traces its inception, at least nominally, to the International Meridian Conference that convened in Washington, DC in 1884. Here the delegates chose Greenwich as the Prime Meridian; 180 degrees away an empty ocean scattered with isolated islands provided an ideal region to first start the day, hence the International Date Line (IDL). In an east-west crossing the calendar increases one day, for example, Thursday advances to Friday; whereas, a west-east crossing the calendar decreases one day, Friday retreats to Thursday (Figure 1). The IDL operates under de facto rather than de jure status; hence, adjustments represent unilateral decisions of the involved countries. The English, and even the French, maintained home dates during their exploration and colonization of the Pacific, and this is evident in examining the logs of Lieutenant Bligh. This problem of reckoning dates in Polynesia persisted into 19th century until even after the de facto recognition of the International Date Line in 1884. This generated Sabbath mismatches between indigenous residents (local) and their European visitors (British, French) with adjacent Sundays co-existing across the Society Islands (Tahitian Sabbath) and elsewhere.

Thursday or Friday?

Most accounts, including letters and extracts from Captains Pipon, Staines, Henderson, and Kings, report Thursday as the original name. For official documents, Thursday occurs in the Pitcairn Island Register Book and on the Lucy Ann’s passenger list of emigrants to Tahiti. Just a few eyewitness accounts use Friday, one is Lieutenant Shillibeer of the Briton and two interviews with Jenny, the Tahitian and ex-consort of mutineers John Adams and Isaac Martin. Secondary sources often name only Thursday, while others mention a name change from Thursday to Friday or back again to Thursday. Mutineer descendant and Pitcairn historian Rosalind Young (1853-1924) used Thursday throughout her now classic and rare book. Glynn Christian (b. 1942), another descendant, assigned the original dating error to Fletcher for not accounting for a date line crossing. When Thursday ‘learned,’ he promptly changed his name to Friday.\textsuperscript{41} This explanation is insufficient as it ignored the how, when, and where of this calendar error. Lummis purports Friday, but within parentheses, ‘(his name was changed from ‘Thursday’ when it was discovered that the settlers were a day behind, having lost a day by nearly circumnavigation the world).’\textsuperscript{42} Ball states that the name change was from Friday to Thursday. He said this occurred in 1808 during the visit of Mayhew Folger of the \textit{Topaz}. Spencer Murray from \textit{Pitcairn Island: The First 200 Years} provides still another explanation for the calendar correction.\textsuperscript{43}

---

It wasn’t until 17 September 1814 (a true date taking into account the day-change calculation) and the arrival of two British ships at Pitcairn, HMS \textit{Briton} and HMS \textit{Tagus}, commanded respectively by Sir Thomas Staines and Philip Pipon, that the calendar error was explained to the islanders. Fletcher’s eldest son, named Thursday October Christian after the day and month of his birth in 1790, promptly changed his name to Friday (although he continued to be called Thursday by his fellows and named one of his sons Thursday as well). By proper reckoning, however, he should have been called \textit{Wednesday}!

Wahlroos and Kirk agree that had there been an unaccounted eastward crossing of the ‘date line,’ a correct name change would be to Wednesday as stated in the preceding quote from Spencer Murray.\textsuperscript{44} An eastward crossing of the date line results in a one-day subtraction from the calendar, so Thursday would become Wednesday.

\textbf{Discussion}

That there was a name change seems reasonable given eyewitness accounts from Lieutenant Shillibeer and two from Jenny, an original settler on Pitcairn Island for three decades. Although Shillibeer of the \textit{Briton} (1814) did not leave the ship, he had the opportunity to meet at least two of the islanders. On encountering McCoy, a mutineer’s son, Shillibeer asked him whether he knew Fletcher Christian. McCoy responded, ‘Oh yes … his son is in the boat there coming up, his name is Friday Fletcher October Christian.’\textsuperscript{45} The second usage of Friday was from Jenny, someone who would have known. Jenny was the only consort who left Pitcairn to return circuitously to Tahiti. There she gave two interviews

\textsuperscript{41} Christian, \textit{Fragile Paradise: The Discovery of Fletcher Christian, Bounty Mutineer}, 337.
\textsuperscript{42} Lummis, \textit{Life and death in Eden: Pitcairn Island and the Bounty Mutineers}, 181.
\textsuperscript{43} Murray, \textit{Pitcairn Island, the First 200 Years}, 50.
\textsuperscript{44} Wahlroos, \textit{Mutiny and Romance in the South Seas: A Companion to the Bounty Adventure}, 325;
Kirk, \textit{Pitcairn Island, the Bounty Mutineers and Their Descendants: A History}, 49.
\textsuperscript{45} Shillibeer, \textit{Narrative of the Briton’s Voyage to Pitcairn Island}, 82.
published (including reprints) in the Sydney Gazette, the United Service Journal and Naval and Military Magazine and The Asiatic Journal and Monthly Register for British India and its Dependencies. In the interview appearing in the Sydney Gazette, she mentions the birth of Fletcher Christian’s son, Friday, and his marriage to Teraura. In Jenny’s interview published in the United Service Journal and Naval and Military Magazine and The Asiatic Journal and Monthly Register for British India and its Dependencies, she made a fleeting comment about Friday’s birth and baptism on the island by William Brown. Her reference to Friday stimulated the editor to add the footnote, ‘This differs from all other accounts. His Name, according to Sir T. Staines and Capt. Folger, is Thursday October Christian’ (Bligh and Christian, 2001, 231). This is a conundrum. Why Friday? Jenny’s mention of Friday does give some credence that there is some truth to a name change. How is this possible? Since she left with Captain Reynolds of the American ship Sultan in 1817 her contact spans from 1790 to 1817.

Thursday name appears several times in the Pitcairn Island Register Book, however, Friday does not occur. The change from Thursday to Friday gained usage in the aftermath of Captain Mayhew Folger’s visit sailing on the American whaler, Topaz in 1808. However, there is no direct evidence, other than circumstantially, to substantiate that Folger initiated the calendar change. During the Tagus and Briton’s visit in 1814, Lieutenant Shillibeer recorded Friday, and while the two English captains, Pippon and Staines record Thursday. Thereafter, Thursday gained prominence with the name surfacing on a list of residents compiled during the Elizabeth’s visit in 1819, and on a list of passengers sailing on the Lucy Anne to Tahiti in 1831. His use of Thursday for a son born in 1820 circumstantially supports Thursday over Friday. Finally, the Register records his death 21 April 1831 as Thursday October Christian. Still some doubt exists, with Shapiro, Ball, Dening, and Frost, all secondary sources, claiming Friday came first. Most eyewitnesses accounts refer to the first born as Thursday, including Staines, Pippon, Bechervaise, the Lucy Anne’s log, and the Pitcairn Island Register Book.

The calendar change probably originated during the short visit by Captain Folger in 1808 of the American whaler Topaz. Folger had crossed into the Pacific from Cape Horn, and therefore thought adding a day to the calendar appropriate. Bligh, following custom of that era, ignored correcting dates on crossing the 180°

---

50 Thursday October Christian the II appeared in the Pitcairn Island Register Book and manifest from the Lucy Anne, both cited earlier.
Further, during the 1700s and 1800s British ship logs were kept according to nautical time; this adds another dimension confound factor. A nautical day begins at noon today and ends at noon tomorrow, but is given tomorrow’s date. On Friday, 19 September 1788 (nautical calendar), the Bounty was located at 178.7° west longitude; and on Saturday, 20 September 1788, the ship had sailed across the 180° meridian to 179.8 east longitude. Under the civic calendar, this same event began noon on Thursday, September 18, and continued to noon on Friday, September 19. Had Thursday October Christian been born at sea, this might have been another trifling point of confusion. Fortunately, Jenny, a former consort and eyewitness, said William Brown baptized the child on Pitcairn Island. The mutineers would have converted from nautical to civil time sometime between taking the ship and settling on Pitcairn Island.

While the Bounty ventured close the 180° meridian after the mutiny, Maude’s reconstruction (mapping) has the ship venturing just east of the line (178° E), but not crossing, near Vatoa or Ono-i-Lau (Fiji). This Maude gleaned from two eyewitness accounts. One account is from Morrison, a mutineer who later elected to remain on Tahiti, hence apprehended by Captain Edward Edwards of the HMS Pandora, and untimely tried, found guilty, then pardoned; the other from Jenny, a Tahitian, subsequently interview on two occasions after spending thirty years on Pitcairn Island.

The editors of the Quarterly Review mentioned being ‘favoured with some further particulars,’ presumably from Captain Pipon, added comments on Pitcairn’s calendar confusion.

This was occasioned by the Bounty having proceeded thither by the eastern route, and our frigates having gone to the westward; and the Topaz found them right according to his own reckoning, she having also approached the island from the eastward. Every ship from Europe proceeding to Pitcairn’s Island round the cape of Good Hope will find them a day later, - as those who approach then round Cape Horn, a day in advance, as the case with Captain Folger, and the Captains Sir T. Staines and Pipon.

It is interesting that only after Folger’s 1808 visit does Thursday change his name to Friday, and this was substantiated in McCoy’s introduction of ‘Friday October Christian’ to Lieutenant Shillibeer in 1814.

---

51 Neither did Captain Cook correct for crossing the dateline on his voyages across the 180th meridian. See James Cook, The Journals of Captain Cook, (London, Penguin Classics, 2003), 68-73, 310.
53 William Brown, mutineer, was a gardener assigned to the Bounty; Bligh and Christian, The Bounty Mutiny, 231.
In assigning blame, credit Folger for adding a day to the island’s calendar. Pipon emphatically blamed the “American Captain of the Topaz,” Mayhew Folger for misleading the islanders. Captains Staines and Pipon on their visit in 1814 realized that the islanders’ needed to subtract one day from their calendar. Pipon placed blame on Captain Folger during his brief 1808 visit, he wrote that

On our arrival here we found that John Adams was mistaken in the day of the Week & Month: he considered it to be Sunday the 18 Sept 1814 & to his Credit they were keeping the Sabbath very properly making it a day of rest & prayer: whereas it was Saturday the 17th. by his account he had been misled by the American Captain of the Topaz when she touched here, & it was pleasing to observe, that they made the Sabbath day a day of rest, & set it apart for particular prayer & devotion.\footnote{Pipon, ‘Capt Pipon’s Narrative of the State Mutineers of H. M. Ship Bounty Settled on Pitcairns Island in the South Sea’, page 11 of transcription.}

It is ironic twist that from about 1808 to 1814 that these future Seventh Day Adventists were worshiping on Saturday. Interestingly, when the Pitcairners changed from Church of England en masse to Seventh-day Adventism in 1887, Pitcairn’s Sabbath changed again from Sunday to Saturday.

\section*{Conclusion}

Thursday October Christian was born in 1790 well east of the 180° meridian on Pitcairn Island. Bligh’s \textit{Bounty} did not correct for an eastward crossing of the 180° meridian in 1788.Supposing the IDL existed in 1789, in an eastward crossing, Thursday becomes Wednesday and not Friday. When Folger crossed into the Pacific from Cape Horn in 1808, he erroneously thought to advance the calendar one day; hence, a Thursday became a \textit{faux} Friday, and so forth (i.e. Saturday became a \textit{faux} Sunday). During 1814, Staines and Pipon learned that the Pitcairners were one day ahead on their calendar! With Staines and Pipon alerting the islanders of this predicament, Friday changed his name back to Thursday, and John Adams, the last surviving mutineer, returned to keeping the Sabbath on Sunday instead of Saturday until the adoption of Seventh-Day Adventism when it ironically returned to Saturday.

Thursday October Christian is the name given to the first-born son of Fletcher Christian. That he might have changed his name to Friday after the arrival of Mayhew Folger in 1808, and later reverted to Thursday with a calendric correction suggested by Captains Staines and Pipon in 1814. Two of the eyewitness accounts support that a name change occurred, at least temporarily. How else does one account for Shillbeer’s sketch titled Friday Fletcher October Christian, McCoy’s introducing “Friday” to Shillibeer, and Jenny reference to a son born to Fletcher Christian as Friday. Since Jenny left Pitcairn Island in 1817 she would have been around during the name change, and that might have remained the most vivid in her memory. However, after 1814, the name Thursday October Christian claims dominance; he even names a son born in 1820 Thursday October Christian.

Notwithstanding the Thursday or Friday conundrum, the first-born child of the mutiny on the Bounty, by all accounts, was an honest, hospitable, and thoughtful individual. During his lifetime of forty years (1790 to 1831) forty ships called on Pitcairn Island. These ships started arriving during his eighteenth and continuing until his final departure on the transport Lucy Anne to Tahiti in 1831. This ordinary person while living on an exceptionally remote island still managed to interact with seafarers from American and Britain and encountered sealers, whalers, merchants and traders, and naval officers including numerous commanders, captains and masters. Today his legacy lives on among the Pitcairn Islanders and Bounty enthusiasts around the world. His memory lives on in stamps issued by Norfolk Island and the Pitcairn Islands. Even with these stamps the name confusion continues with Norfolk Island using Thursday October Christian and The Pitcairn Islands Friday October Christian. The enigma lives on.

Bibliography

Beechey, Frederick W. Narrative of A Voyage To The Pacific And Beering's Strait, To Co-Operate With The Polar Expeditions: Performed In His Majesty's Ship Blossom, Under The Command Of Captain F. W. Beechey, R. N. In The Years 1825, 26, 27, 28. London: Henry Colburn and Richard Bentley, 1831.

Shapiro, The Heritage of the Bounty, 1936, 107; Ford, Pitcairn: Port of Call, 3-16.

Hawkesworth, John, et al., An Account of the Voyages Undertaken by the Order of His Present Majesty for Making Discoveries in the Southern Hemisphere, and Successively Performed by Commodore Byron, Captain Wallis, Captain Carteret, and Captain Cook, in the Dolphin, the Swallow, and the Endeavour: Drawn Up from the Journals Which Were Kept by the Several Commanders, and from the Papers of Joseph Banks, Esq. London: Printed for W. Strahan and T. Cadell in the Strand, 1773.

Philip Pipon, "The Descendants of the Bounty's Crew: As First Discovered by the Briton and Tagus Frigates. – From the Unpublished Mss. of the Late Capt. Pipon, R.N." The United Service Journal (1834), Pt.1: 197.

Shillibeer, J. A. Narrative of the Briton’s Voyage, to Pitcairn’s Island. London: Law and Whittaker, 1817.

Figures and Tables

Figure 1. Pitcairn Island and the International Date Line

Figure 2. Life Events of Thursday October Christian, 1790-1831

Figure: Shillibeer’s Sketch of Thursday October Christian. 1814